

R. Clay Stephenson, PMP

Consultant, Maestro Strategies

cstephenson@maestrostrategies.com

Clay Stephenson brings over 25 years of management and consulting experience in the healthcare, telecommunications and information technology industries to bear on behalf of Maestro Strategies' clients.

Most recently, he has played a key role working with Maestro Strategies in assessment of VHA Georgia hospitals for ARRA HITECH readiness and is currently serving as Project Manager in the Tift Regional Health System physician practice business development engagement.

He has previous experience in consulting at Ernst & Whinney and Price Waterhouse, and has worked with a number of leading software firms including TDS Healthcare Systems (Eclipsys), Gerber Alley (McKesson) and Transition Systems, Inc., Ventyx (energy utility CIS/CRM applications, Alltel (wireless telecom billing/CRM applications) and EnerLink (energy utility billing software) in Product Management and Program Management capacities.

He has expertise in managing large enterprise data center operations having managed outsourced data center operations for GTE Wireless and Georgia Power Co. and has managed a number of large software implementation project efforts in the healthcare, telecom and electric, water and gas utility sectors.

In addition, Mr. Stephenson has managed several large software development teams leading to the development of industry leading application software products for hospitals, telecom providers and utilities. Mr. Stephenson has authored several articles in various healthcare magazines and journals regarding the development and implementation of advanced Decision Support and Executive Information Systems.

Mr. Stephenson holds a Master of Science degree in Health Systems and a Bachelor of Science degree in Physics, both from Georgia Tech.